Khadija Zinnenburg Carroll

Bachelor of Arts (Hons), 2003

Khadija Carroll, winner of the 2003 David Myers Medal and Peter Reynold's Prize for Honours Art History (2003) has now gained the Frank Knox Memorial Fellowship at Harvard which will fund her doctoral studies.

She appreciates the way the Art History Program here has provided the opportunity for her to explore an interdisciplinary approach to art history: her studies have focused on the relationship between word and image, drawing on literature and aesthetic philosophy.

As her honours year drew to a close in 2003, Khadija gained a contract to work as a researcher with Professor Tim Mehigan at Melbourne University on an ARC grant, 'the Enlightenment project of vision'.

"The Art History Program ... provided the opportunity ... to explore an interdisciplinary approach to art history."
