An information session on an honours year in history

Thinking of Doing Honours in History?

An Honours year in history is an opportunity to do more intensive and independent study than is generally possible at undergraduate level. It gives you the freedom to choose a topic of your choice to learn in depth about; it enhances your university studies; and looks great on a resume. Students who complete an Honours year find it challenging but personally and academically rewarding as well as an avenue into further study or related employment.

If you are in second or third year and have been getting a B average or higher for your History major, you may be eligible to apply. The Honours Information Lunch will give you access to basic information about eligibility and applications and give you the chance to find out more.

Tuesday 8 September
Martin Lecture Theatre
1:00-2:00 PM

All are welcome to attend, but second and third year students are especially encouraged.
