

Brian's Puzzle of the Week: 5

You have three colours of paint:
red, green and blue.

It is possible to paint the plane \mathbb{R}^2 using all three colours in such a way that every line in the plane has exactly two colours.

How can it be done?

['Line' means a straight line extending forever
in both directions.]