

3rd year Microbiology 2004 – Summary of student responses

MIC31AMM and MIC32EPM

From interpretation of the subject evaluation questionnaires completed by the students it appears that, as in previous years, in 2004 the students were again well satisfied with both subjects and therefore the 3rd year Microbiology course as a whole.

When invited to make specific comments on the subjects in the appropriate section on the questionnaires, a substantial number of students indicated that they had found them interesting. They commented, in particular, on the interest generated by the practical classes and their good relevance to the lectures. As usual with these subjects, some students expressed greater interest in some areas relative to others. In general, however, students appeared to be happy with the course overall and this also reflects the impression the subject coordinator and associate lecturers gained during the course of the year.