

Director(s), Faculty Planning and Operations

(3 positions)

Established in 1964, La Trobe University is a multi campus institution and an internationally recognised leader in tertiary education and training, with strong research and teaching programs and student exchange networks across more than 40 countries. It is committed to providing undergraduate and postgraduate teaching of the highest quality, supported by an outstanding research profile. The University is seeking to appoint three high level, commercially orientated Director's to head the key faculties of:

- Health Sciences
- Law and Management
- Science, Technology & Engineering

As the Director you will be responsible for leading and managing the Faculty's operational and business services which support the university's strategic and operational goals in teaching and learning, research, internationalisation and regional engagement. Reporting to the Dean and working closely with Function Heads in areas of; finance and resource planning, strategic and operational issues, teaching and learning, student services and support, marketing, human resources, IT and research your accountability also includes Faculty policy, systems and processes.

You must have the ability to build and maintain effective relationships with a diverse group of internal and external stakeholders and draw on your strong track record of innovative leadership and management, strategic thinking, policy development, staff management, finance and systems management. The role will appeal to individuals who can combine strategy with hands on operational management.

An understanding of the higher education environment including knowledge of current issues and experience in the management of academic administration would be highly regarded. Beyond this you will have extensive experience in a large, complex and service oriented environment requiring the coordination, integration and management of a range of people, resources and business services functions.
